ISSUE No. 04

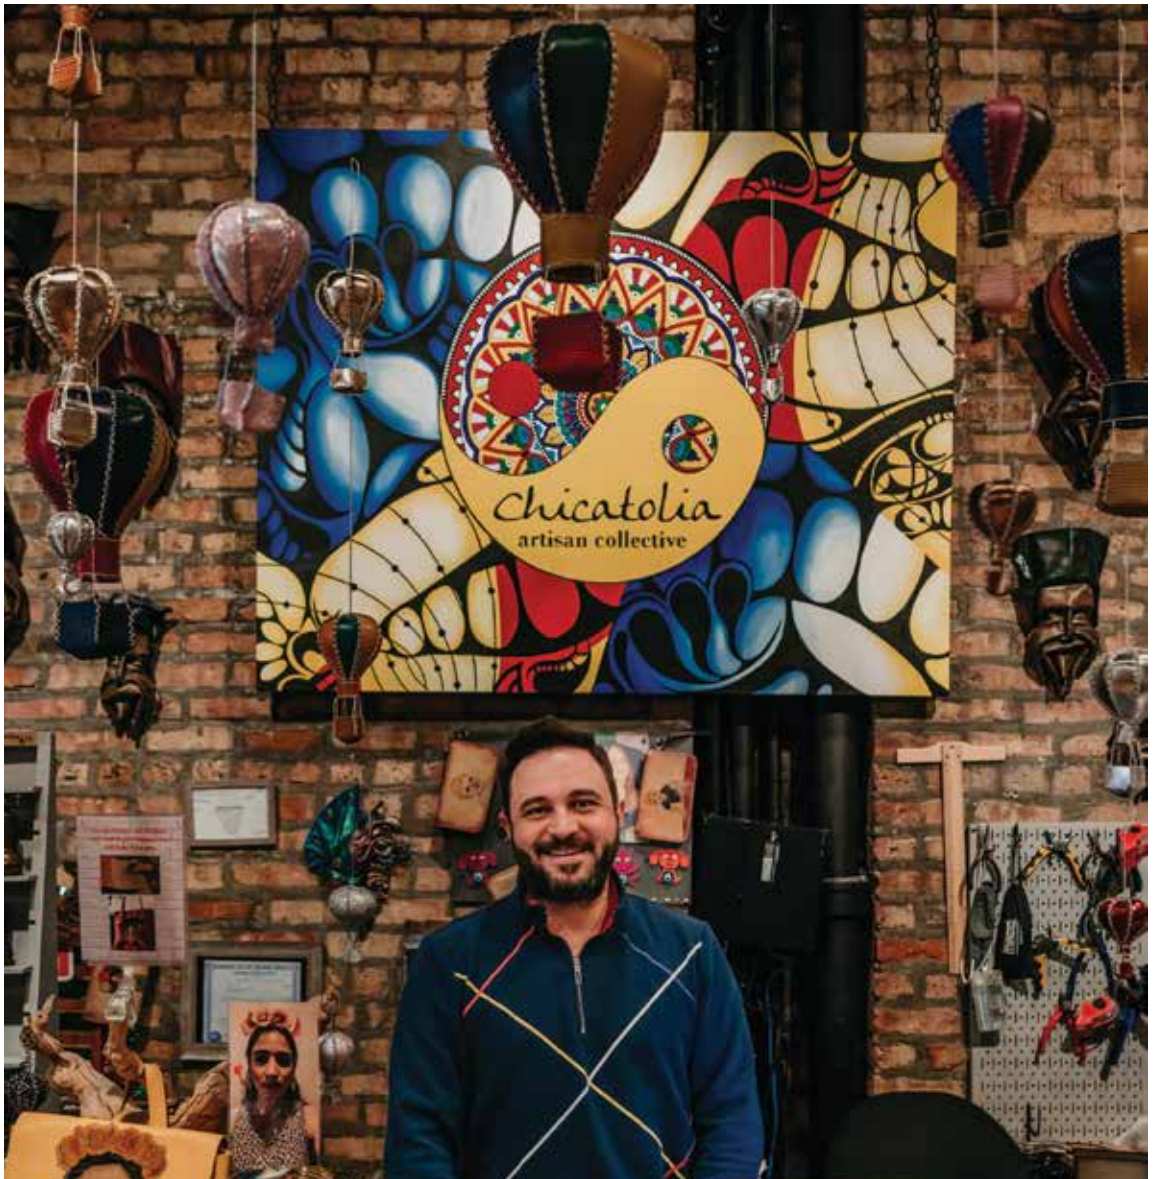

Women & Children First 5233 N Clark

*Hello, Bookstore!

Women & Children First began in a modest storefront in 1979 and has called Andersonville home for more than 30 years. WCF staffers include teachers, graduate students, actors, storytellers, activists, mothers, board members, and published authors. Each of them is a reader, a feminist, and a bookseller. One of the largest feminist bookstores in the country, WCF stocks more than 20,000 books by and about women, children's books, and the best LGBTQIA+ literature. They also carry cards, journals, posters, calendars, buttons, flags, and more. WCF has hosted hundreds of great women authors and feminist icons, including Gloria Steinem, Maya Angelou, Roxane Gay, U.S. Supreme Court Justice Sonia Sotomayor, Ann Patchett, Sandra Cisneros, Laura Jane Grace. With the support of their amazing community, they are able to build mission-driven partnerships, like donating more than 1,000 books each year to Chicago Books to Women in Prison. Co-owner Sarah Hollenbeck's favorite thing about co-owning the shop is, of course, talking about books! "Communing around a book can propel a conversation in a million exciting directions—personal, political, and more. A book can start or deepen a relationship with a stranger, a loved one, or even oneself. What else can do that?" womenandchildrenfirst.com

One young customer would always shout, "Hello, Bookstore!" the moment he walked in the door!*

[welcome]

Welcome to Andersonville. A neighborhood on Chicago’s north side, Andersonville is known for its Swedish roots, historic architecture, and bustling business district anchored by North Clark Street. When you arrive in Andersonville, you feel you have arrived someplace special. We are recognized as the “shop local capital of Chicago,” supporting the largest network of local and independent businesses in the area, including one-of-a-kind retailers, popular cafes and restaurants, a home and vintage district, theaters, and more. Home to one of Chicago’s largest LGBTQIA2+ populations, Andersonville is a community full of pride and a commitment to equality. Andersonville is for everyone.

We are also a neighborhood of stories. We hope you discover these stories throughout the pages of this guide (which features the nearly 400 businesses that are members of the Andersonville Chamber of Commerce), and by eventually visiting Andersonville and meeting our business owners face to face. Each is unique, and each has a reason for loving this special neighborhood.

Whether you are local and choosing to explore a new Chicago neighborhood, or visiting from elsewhere nationally or internationally (or even exploring online):
Valkommen.

We invite you to explore Andersonville.

Swedish American Museum 5211 N Clark

Chicago was once the home of the second-largest Swedish population in the world, second only to Stockholm! So it's not surprising that the Swedish American Museum, opened in 1976 by Swedish immigrant Kurt Mathiasson, has been a cornerstone of the Andersonville community for more than 45 years. Its permanent exhibit tells the story of Swedish immigration, which resonates with visitors regardless of their family's country of origin. Constantly evolving, you can enjoy the new courtyard and watch the addition of a permanent café and expansion into the building next door, which will complement the Museum's art exhibits, genealogy center, children's museum, and museum store. swedishamericanmuseum.org

Historien om

[the story of]

Illustrations by: Hex Design & Co

The Chicago area is located on ancestral lands of indigenous tribes, such as the Council of the Three Fires comprised of the Ojibwe, Odawa, and Potawatomi Nations—as well as the Miami, Ho-Chunk, Menominee, Sac, Fox, Kickapoo, and Illinois Nations. Native Indigenous People made Chicago their home and played a role in founding the city only to be forcefully removed in the 1830s. These tribes had thriving trade networks in the Menominee Nation Great Lakes area prior to European contact. The tribes in what is now Chicago and the Great Lakes area would feel the brunt of many land cessations and several relocation efforts over the coming years.

The Andersonville Commercial Historic District is closely associated with the Swedish community that moved to the neighborhood following the Chicago Fire in 1871. The district contains fully intact turn-of-the-century commercial buildings that represent the popular architectural styles of the time. Many Swedish run companies, theaters, retail shops, bakeries, and banks thrived in the area. The earliest buildings in the downtown district included a school house at the southwest corner of Clark and Foster, which bore the name Andersonville Schoolhouse. The school spurred nearby development and the name of the community became Andersonville.

Settling in Andersonville in 1990, Women and Children First Bookstore has acted as a respite for the LGBTQIA2+ community rooted in its dedication to intersectional feminism and lifting up underrepresented voices. In 2018, work began to uplift the Transgender community and in 2019, we gathered together with Chicago Therapy Collective for a chalk activation to celebrate and protect trans lives. Today, emboldened to take a hard look at our privilege, we are committed to anti-racist work by engaging our BIPOC members and partners and will use our collective voice and influence to drive racial equity impact and change and to advocate for those whose voices have historically been discounted or silenced.

Life at the Intersections

Designed and painted by Molly Costello in the summer of 2021 with assistance from Nell Seggerson and Rae Wilson. The project was funded by the Chicago Association of Realtors®, the Andersonville Chamber of Commerce, and SSA #22.

“Life at the Intersections’ pushes us to imagine a safer, more inclusive future that honors the intersections of our identities and helps us generate a future of collective wellness, environmental stewardship, abundance and play.”

Molly Costello (they/them) is a queer illustrator, food grower, bee keeper, and seed saver living in Rogers Park. Through their art practice they explore themes of interconnectedness, cosmology, biomimicry and social transformation. Molly hopes that through the making and sharing of their artwork they can play a small role in the deep work of reimagining and reshaping our culture out of patterns of supremacy, violence and greed toward a culture of accountability, collective wellness, and abundance. mollycostello.com

[The Podcast]

The Always Andersonville Podcast shares the stories of Andersonville. Since the launch of the podcast in March of 2018, the Andersonville Chamber of Commerce has interviewed over 150 business owners, musicians, long-time and new residents, elected officials, changemakers, and more.

Why do a podcast about a neighborhood? There is something unique and universal about working, living, visiting somewhere that has a sense of place. That sense of place in Andersonville is derived from a rich and celebrated history; from an engaged community and engaged citizens; from the blood, sweat and tears of small business owners—all those things contribute to a strong sense of place. When you arrive in Andersonville, you feel you have arrived somewhere different.

Svea 5236 N Clark Episode 39

90 years in business—same name, same location. Honoring Andersonville’s Scandinavian roots, Svea is one of the sole remaining relics of Swedish dining in this northside enclave and beloved by all! Home of the Viking Breakfast, this old-school diner, open for breakfast and lunch daily, features a sprawling menu of Swedish comfort food, from thin pancakes draped in lingonberries to savory Swedish sausages, meatballs, open-faced sandwiches on limpa bread, and more.

Early to Bed 5044 N Clark Episode 9

Helping all kinds of folks have great sex since 2001, Early to Bed is committed to offering a safe, welcoming space to shop for erotic delights. Owner Searah Deysach fell in love with Andersonville’s inclusivity back in high school. That inspiration has translated into her store, and Early to Bed’s goal is to make a first-time sex shop experience comfortable, fun, and not scary. With a focus on education, safety, and inclusion, no other Chicago establishment can compare! All toys are hand-selected and meet the store’s fussy must-have standards of safety, usability, and value. In 2022, Early to Bed is putting down permanent roots on Clark street in a beautiful new space at 5128 N Clark. early2bed.com

Land & Lake 5420 N Clark Episode 150

Land & Lake’s focus is serving elevated takes on classic midwestern dishes and the name is an homage to the region, sourcing a majority of their products from the states depicted on the map in their logo. The bar program focuses primarily on local and regional beer and liquors and American made wine. Located behind the restaurant is a covered, private garden area, perfect for events. Local Chicago artist Jason Brammer created two not-to-miss wall murals featuring historic buildings from the area and highlighting the iconic Swedish flag water tower. landlkitchen.com

Land bekräftelse

[land acknowledgment]

The area that we now call Chicago is the traditional homeland of the people of the Council of Three Fires. This area has long been a vibrant site of trade, life, and community-making for many Indigenous nations and is now home to 65,000 American Indian people. As the current occupants of this land, many of us are here as a legacy of the forced removal of Indigenous Peoples by a settler-colonial state. As a step toward honoring the truth and achieving healing and reconciliation, we encourage you to explore the work of organizations like The American Indian Center, The Chi-Nations Youth Council, and the International Indigenous Youth Council and to support native art and artists, organizers, activists, and people in your community.*

* Land Acknowledgement courtesy of Steep Theatre.

Known in the early '90s as a safe haven for Chicago's LGBTQIA2+ community, Andersonville has now blossomed into one of the queerest areas of the city. In addition to our residents, we have a substantial density of LGBTQIA2+ owned businesses, nightlife, and local talent. The Andersonville Chamber of Commerce strives to support the movements and events in our neighborhood that align with our organizational values of equality, inclusion, and anti-racism. We work to make strategic changes within the Andersonville Chamber of Commerce as well as in the membership and wider community. This work centers on offering resources and trainings to neighborhood business owners and employees on the necessary and urgent work around anti-racism and allyship to the transgender/non-binary community, as well as neurodiverse and other differently abled populations to provide safe and accessible spaces for all.

"This beautiful city inspires me every day," shares Chicago Foodways Tours founder Phyllis Petrilli. Celebrating the business's 7th year, Phyllis' favorite part of her work is watching people from all over the world experience Andersonville for the first time. "The stories of our food are really the stories of immigrants. The term "foodways" is used to describe the intersection of food, culture, and history." This is exactly what you can expect on a 3.5-hour Chicago Foodways Food Tour of Andersonville, available every weekend between April and December. chicagofoodways.com

Something Profound Weddings 5315 N Clark

Wedding planner Rebecca Pope, owner of Something Profound Weddings, originally became ordained as a fail-safe for her couples (in case an officiant ever missed a call time). With her trusty binder and thorough digital checklist, she eats, sleeps, and breathes weddings so that you can relax and enjoy your engagement. "I love what I do, I love my couples, and I love seeing everything come together for that moment when they look into each other's eyes and realize it's all happening," gushes Rebecca. somethingprofoundweddings.com

Ándale Market 5232 N Clark

Ándale Market is an ode to the New York City bodega, where you can find whatever you need in a pinch. From specialty foods to elevated essentials for pet, home and body, you'll discover your new favorite thing—be it crusty bread, soft cheese, tingling chili oil, tinned fish, or a cutting board to serve it on. With a curated selection that starts in Chicago and spans the globe, owners Mia Sakai and Tim Hannifan's unique eye for pairing products that value flavor, quality, design, and function, have made Ándale a destination and delight. Their inspiration comes from years of eating around the world, from mom-n-pops to Michelin starred tasting menus. The last stop is always the kitchen table, where they recreate the dishes from their memories and build new ones. andalemarket.com

Upon welcoming recreational users, the store expanded its space and inventory to accommodate all—a comfortable waiting area, knowledgeable budtenders, and staff who listen and help. Customers can order in advance, but changes and additions are always welcome. Dispensary 33 is a community-focused dispensary with an appreciation for cannabis products and history. Its knowledgeable staff is always eager to assist both medical and recreational users! dispensary33.com

Meet Farmer Jacob

Meet Farmer Jacob! Green Fire Farm's cattle are 100% grass-fed and grass-finished animals, with no steroids, antibiotics, or hormones. He works hard to raise something he could not only feed his future family and community, but yours as well. Those same values apply to every animal in the farm, including Green Fire Farm pigs, sheep, chickens, turkeys, and eggs. Jacob manages all of Green Fire Farm—animal operations, customer service, product pick-up and delivery, farmers markets, and more!

SSA #22

The Andersonville SSA includes our major commercial district of Clark Street Ainslie to the south and Victoria and reaches east and west to the alley-ways, with the exception of Foster and Balmoral where it extends to Ashland Avenue as well as Olive where it wraps around to the split of Clark and Ashland. SSA 22 includes Ainslie to the south, Victoria to the north and the wonderful mile in between.

SSA #22

What is an SSA?

A “Special Service Area” is a local tax district that funds enhanced services and programs within a contiguous area. The enhanced services and programs are in addition to those currently provided through or by the City of Chicago. SSA-funded projects typically include public way maintenance and beautification, district marketing and advertising, business retention and attraction, special events and promotional activities, security and façade improvements, and other commercial and economic development initiatives.
